Major Requirements

Required for Departmental Student in Journalism:

The Journalism Honors Program gives upper-division undergraduates a chance to pursue journalistic research in the context of other academic disciplines. Honors candidates carry out independent study and research under the guidance of the journalism faculty and participate in honors classes in journalism at least one other discipline. To be considered for such distinctions, students must earn a minimum cumulative 3.50 grade-point average in journalism.

Journalism Departmental Scholars must satisfy the general Fulbright College honors requirements as stated elsewhere in this catalog. In addition, journalism departmental scholars must complete a minimum of 12 hours in honors courses, with thesis credit determined by departmental rules. These requirements are specified as follows. Journalism Four-Year and Departmental Honors students must:

- Enter the program no later than the first semester of their junior year, and register for the program beginning with the first semester of the junior year.
- Complete at least one journalism honors colloquium.
- Complete the journalism honors core research course JOUR 5043.
- Complete an approved honors colloquium in a second discipline.
- Complete and orally defend an honors thesis based on honors courses of study.
- Earn a cumulative 3.50 grade-point average in journalism courses.
