Manochehr Dorraj is a professor of political science at Texas Christian University. His recent publications on Middle East-Asia relations include: “The Dragon Nests: China’s Energy Engagement of the Middle East” (w/ J. English); “Iran-China Relations and the Changing Political Map” (w/ J. English); “China’s Strategy for Energy Acquisition in the Middle East: Potential for Conflict and Cooperation with the United States”; China’s Energy Relations with the Developing World (w/ C. Currier); “China’s Quest for Energy Security in the Middle East: Strategic Implications” (w/ C. Currier); China’s Energy Relations with the Developing World (w/ C. Currier). Professor Dorraj has given numerous interviews on global, Middle Eastern and Asian affairs to international and national media, including the Associated Press, United Press International, Agence France Press, The New York Times, PBS, National Public Radio, and The Economist.