THE NORTON SHAKESPEARE BASED ON THE OXFORD EDITION: TRAGEDIES (2nd ed.)

THE ST. MARTIN’S HANDBOOK (6th ed.)

Norton

Bedford/St. Martin

Purpose: To improve students' reading and writing abilities through a study of William Shakespeare's major tragedies: Hamlet, Othello, King Lear, and Macbeth. We'll also be combining the plays with their respective American films (Hamlet 2000, O, King of Texas, and Scotland, P4). The films (all released between 2000 and 2002) are almost scene-for-scene reshoots of the original works, placed within American settings and reinterpreted within some contemporary social, political, or historical conflict. Hopefully, by looking at the texts and the movies, we can frame an understanding of the English Renaissance within today's world and its cultural issues. Warning: the films are all R-rated.

Procedures: Although the outside readings are critical, we'll carefully discuss the plays and watch each of the films in class. Quiz scores will compose 20% of the overall grade. Regular papers will make up 50%. In-class participation will come to 10%, and the final examination will be worth 20%.

Purpose: To study the ways societies work in self-selected electronic spaces through the analysis of the MMORPG World of Warcraft. We will study and ultimately define the concept of "literacy" and how it plays a role in successfully navigating online communities, creating oneself as part of a gaming subculture, and improving successful game play. We will analyze a variety of gaming-focused texts, including NPC and quest text, in-game player dialogue (both raid and channel chats), forum boards, game reviews, and others readings with the goal of understanding how identity and power are shaped through WoW. Our studies of what occurs both in-game and out of the gaming world will help us better understand the concept of literacy in electronic societies.

Procedures: Discussion, workshop, lecture, research, game play, and the writing of papers and exercises. The six written assignments will determine the final grade.

NOTE: STUDENTS WHO DO NOT HAVE A SPECIAL INTEREST IN THIS SECTION'S THEME AND READINGS SHOULD ENROLL IN ANOTHER SECTION.

Purpose: To help students improve their reading and writing through the study of American history and historiography, and through the writing of essays that examine historical texts (selections from journals, full-length books, slave narratives, autobiographies, etc.). Together we will explore the importance of written history as a field; discuss the manner in which written history has constructed American identity; and consider how to conduct historical research using evidence (primary and secondary sources). Though students of history or political science would find this course to be particularly beneficial, any student with an interest in American history will be able to apply the basic reading and writing skills from this course into many fields of study.

Procedures: Discussion, workshop, lecture, independent study, research; and the writing of papers, essay exams, and exercises. The quality of writing will largely determine the final grade.

Purpose: To help students improve their reading and writing by the study of Hollywood screenplays and by the writing of essays that analyze screenplays as literary texts. We will analyze these screenplays through the lens of a Hollywood insider (reader, actor, director, producer), and approach that places a foremost emphasis on story. The class will focus on screenplay terminology, genre, character, scene design, and most importantly, dramatic structure.

Procedures: We will read a different screenplay every week alongside a different chapter from McKee's Story. Class will largely consist of lectures, discussions, and workshops. Grades will be determined by a midterm, a final, three critical papers, and a creative assignment.

Purpose: This course broadly examines how American literature constructs and reflects the formation of a distinct American identity. We will focus both on the literary shifts amidst the turmoil, ingenuity, and establishment of American culture from the colonists' first arrival through the American Revolution, Manifest Destiny, the Civil War, Reconstruction, the closing of the frontier, and the move into the 20th Century. We will cover a range of forms (prose, poetry, and essay) that take on the ideals on which American identity is centered. Through major and minor works, authors who trumpet American ideals and those who critique how those ideals are manifested, we will get a sense of how the nation was made.

Papers: Two major papers (4-6 pgs.), three response papers (2-3 pgs.)

Examinations: Mid-term and final.

Purpose: This course will survey modern and contemporary American literature. Issues and themes we discuss may include, but are not limited to the following: experiments in form and style; literature and the sister arts; gender and sexuality; the role of large-scale violence in shaping literature; the natural world and technology; paranoia; capitalism; and the relationship between high and low art.

We will examine how American literature responds to events of the twentieth century and how it interacts or—fails to interact with race, ethnicity, class, politics, gender, and history.

Papers: One paper (4-7 pages).

Examinations: Midterm, final.

ENGLISH 3013, CREATIVE WRITING II

INSTRUCTOR: STAFF

Textbooks Required: Varies by instructor.

Purpose: An intermediate level course for students who have successfully completed Creative Writing I (ENGL 2023) and who wish to continue writing poetry and fiction in a more advanced class.

Procedure: Students will submit their poetry and fiction for workshop discussion. Full participation, both as a writer and a critic, is expected of each member of the class.

PREREQUISITE: In order to enroll in this course, students must have taken and successfully completed Creative Writing I (ENGL 2023).
ENGLISH 3053, TECHNICAL AND REPORT WRITING
INSTRUCTOR: STAFF

Textbook Required:
Markel TECHNICAL COMMUNICATION (9th ed.) Bedford/St. Martin’s

Purpose: To teach students the criteria for writing and formatting technical documents including extended definitions, process instructions, process descriptions, research proposals, reports, and business correspondence.

Procedures and Assignments: Lecture, discussion, writing exercises, peer-review workshops, exams, and paper assignments.

ENGLISH 3123, FOLK AND POPULAR MUSIC TRADITIONS
INSTRUCTOR: COCHRAN

Textbooks Required:
To be selected.

Purpose: Study of American folk and popular music traditions. No background in music necessary—the course is not technical in nature. We will listen to lots of music, and watch some films about musicians. Guest performers may appear. Readings will discuss the music and explore its contexts. A wide variety of musical traditions will be considered.

Assignments and Examinations: One research or fieldwork term project; two examinations.

ENGLISH 3173, INTRODUCTION TO LINGUISTICS
INSTRUCTOR: FUKUSHIMA

Textbook Required:
Fromkin, Rodman AN INTRODUCTION TO LANGUAGE (9th ed.) Wadsworth

Recommended Reading:
Swan & Swift LEARNER ENGLISH: A TEACHER'S GUIDE TO INTERFERENCE AND OTHER PROBLEMS (2nd ed.) Cambridge UP

Purpose: This course aims to approach a scientific study of language with primary emphasis on modern linguistic theory and analysis. Topics include structures, variation, and historical development of various world languages as well as their relation to culture and society.

Assignments: Exercises 25%, response paper 10%, paper 25%, paper presentation 10%, presentation handout 10%, comprehensive final exam 20%

Because this course focuses on each individual student’s achievement, the instructor will not use the curve to grade the students' scores for any course requirement. The instructor reserves the right to award extra credit for those students who demonstrate excellent work in required assignments. Participation in class activities will have a positive or negative impact on the grades of students in borderline situations. Under no circumstances will the instructor arrange any additional assignment for credit on an individual basis.

ENGLISH 3203, POETRY
INSTRUCTOR: HEFFERNAN

Textbooks Required:
Ferguson, Salter, & Stallworthy, eds. THE NORTON ANTHOLOGY OF POETRY (5th ed.) Norton
Frost THE ROAD NOT TAKEN AND OTHER POEMS Dover
" A BOY’S WILL and NORTH OF BOSTON "
Stevens THE EMPEROR OF ICE-CREAM AND OTHER POEMS "
Yeats "EASTER 1916" AND OTHER POEMS " Shakespeare HAMLET "

Purpose: To read and discuss a large number of poems in a comprehensive anthology providing work from the whole history of poetry in English up to the early 21st century. We will also examine four individual collections of poems, exemplifying how poets organize poems in book form or develop work thematically and stylistically over an extended period. And we will read, probably out loud, one of the greatest examples of dramatic poetry in English.

Assignments: Students will be called upon to contribute to class discussions, and to write one paper based on the reading matter.
ENGLISH 3213, FICTION
INSTRUCTOR: VISWANATHAN

Textbooks Required:

- Maugham CAKES AND ALE
- Behn OROONOKO
- Amis TIME'S ARROW
- Parsipur WOMEN WITHOUT MEN
- Nunez MITZ, THE MARMOSET OF BLOOMSBURY
- Woolf ORLANDO
- Martel SELF

In addition to the above, there will be a number of assigned short stories on reserve.

Purpose: To teach close reading for the fiction writer and serious lover of literature.

Procedure: Extended discussions on the bones and breath of literature—what each fictional work under consideration does and how it achieves that effect.

Assignments: One short presentation; weekly reading quizzes; in-class discussion; and two 5-8 pp writing assignments, one of which must be creative. No Exam.

ENGLISH 3713, MEDIEVAL LITERATURE AND CULTURE: ARTHURIAN LEGENDS
INSTRUCTOR: LEWIS

Textbooks Required:

- BarBer, ed. THE ARTHURIAN LEGENDS Boydell (0851151108)
- Malory LE MORTE DARTHUR Norton (9780393974645)

Supplemental texts no (required):

Scanned readings as necessary

Purpose: From Geoffrey of Monmouth to Chrétien de Troyes, The Once and Future King to Monty Python and the Holy Grail, the legend of Arthur, his noble knights, and the Holy Grail is one of the most popular and enduring myths to come out of the middle ages. This course will begin with the earliest stories of Arthur as a native Welsh or Roman ruler, and follow the legend as it spreads out from Wales to become a pan-European myth of gentility and noble deeds—until it is frozen by Thomas Malory in the late 15th century. We will also look at a few of the modern versions of Arthur, and ask what place the legends have in our own time and culture.

Papers, Presentations and Exams: In addition to a midterm and a final, students will be responsible for two presentations—one on a tale or work we didn't read in class, and one on secondary criticism—and a final research paper.

ENGLISH 3743, Section 001/5403, Section 001, 19TH-CENT BRIT LIT AND CULTURE: VICTORIAN PROSE AND POETRY
INSTRUCTOR: SEXTON

Textbooks Required:

Purpose: This course introduces and examines poetry and non-fiction prose of the Victorian period. Reading selections will be drawn from both well-known and somewhat obscure (though equally influential) poets and prose writers of the age. In our study of the works, we will also focus on a number of the significant historical and cultural contexts of the period. Among these are the condition of England question; faith, doubt, knowledge; gender and sexuality; empire and travel; and the function of poetry. In addition to the prose and poetry, we will also examine representative artwork of the period.

Papers, Etc: One short response paper, 3-5 pages in length, one oral presentation on a full-length work, and one critical paper, (5-10 pages for undergraduates and 15-20 pages for graduate students) and regular Blackboard postings.

Examinations: Midterm

WHAT IS JEWISH AMERICAN FICTION?

Tentative Textbooks Required:

- Roth, P: PORTNOY’S COMPLAINT
- "GOODBYE, COLUMBUS"
- Ozick: THE PUTTERMESER PAPERS
- Malamud: THE FIXER
- Bellow: HERZOG
- Yezierska: THE BREAD GIVERS
- Roth, H: CALL IT SLEEP
- Spiegelman: MAUS: A SURVIVOR’S TALE
- Bashevis Singer: ZLATEH THE GOAT AND OTHER STORIES
- Goldstein: THE MIND-BODY PROBLEM

Purpose: This course will explore some of the ways that modern Jewish writers create a fictionalized America, and examine the dilemmas of a "Jewish-American identity." We will start our journey with a bit of shtetl life, through the imagination and stories of I.B Singer, and then spend most of our time with twentieth-century Jewish American writers as they create the experiences of Jews in America: "sometimes not knowing which to give more piety to" (Saul Bellow).

Papers and Procedures: There will be one (10 page) research project, one oral presentation on a researched project and several shorter analyses papers.

Examinations: There will be one midterm and one final exam.

HORROR AND VIOLENCE IN THE SOUTHERN NOVEL

Required Texts:

- Poe: THE NARRATIVE OF ARTHUR GORDON PYM OF NANTUCKET
- Chesnutt: THE CONJURE-WOMAN AND OTHER CONJURE TALES
- Faulkner: LIGHT IN AUGUST
- Wright: EARLY WORKS
- McCullers: THE HEART IS A LONELY HUNTER
- O'Connor: THE VIOLENT BEAR IT AWAY
- Percy: LANCELOT
- McCarthy: SUTTREE
- Allison: BASTARD OUT OF CAROLINA

Supplemental Texts (not required):

- Cash: THE MIND OF THE SOUTH
- Wyatt-Brown: HONOR AND VIOLENCE IN THE OLD SOUTH
- Lillian Smith: KILLERS OF THE DREAM

Purpose: One persistent stereotype of the American South is that we are somehow "gothic" in our fondness for grotesquerie, violence, and psychological horror, especially in our literature. And maybe we are attracted to the sensational aspects of such subject matter. Yet the violence and horror in southern writing is intertwined with a very real and rich social history. This course seeks to understand the uses of violence and horror in the southern novel, and to explore their appeal to authors from a broad variety of social backgrounds. Though the course topic is rather specific, it invites discussion of a broad range of social issues. Authors from Poe and Faulkner to Cormac McCarthy and Dorothy Allison use violence partially as a way to explore conflicts about gender, race, class, and family issues, to name only a few things we might talk about. Among other questions, we will contemplate whether such literature is "gothic" at all, how the horrific and the comic intersect, what aspects of horror continue to resonate in our own time and place, and how authors have varied these themes to fit new issues and new historical moments. So sit a spell, take your shoes off... and ignore that rusty ol' scythe in the corner. Are you afraid? No? You will be.

Papers, presentations, special procedures, etc: The student's course grade will rest on class participation, two class presentations, four brief response papers, and one research paper.

Examinations: None.

Examinations: None.
Purpose: This course will be a study of the forms of selfhood reflected in and shaped by forms of modernism and postmodernism. We will be especially interested in thinking about how certain literary forms-like the Freudian case study, autobiography, the bildungsroman, and the social novel, along with other kinds of narrative employment-help to produce and memorialize certain types of subjectivity. We will also read with an eye toward the role of medicine, law, and psychiatry in institutionalizing the various "minds of modernism" we see both performed and called into question. As we study literature's participation in various psychological and pseudo-psychological practices and theories of the period, we will consider how modernist literature describes memory, will, sensation, happiness, boredom, nostalgia, anxiety, melancholy, paranoia, sexuality, and suffering. The course will conclude with a brief glimpse into the afterlife of modernism's fascination with psychology. Expect supplementary readings by various philosophers and early theorists of scientific psychology, including René Descartes, Friedrich Nietzsche, Edmund Husserl, John Locke, Henri Bergson, William James, and Sigmund Freud.

Requirements: Undergraduate students: 2 papers, midterm, final exam. Graduate students: an article-length (©. 15-25 pages) research paper. M.A. Advisory Code for 5803, Section 002: G (See last page of course descriptions.)

ENGLISH 3903, Section 002, SPECIAL TOPICS, SECTION, WOMEN AND THE NOVEL

INSTRUCTOR: WALKER

Textbooks Required:

- Plath, THE BELL JAR
- Harper, IOLA LEROY

- Hurston, THEIR EYES WERE WATCHING GOD
- Naylor, THE WOMEN OF BREWSTER PLACE
- Robinson, HOUSEKEEPING
- Erdrich, THE BEET QUEEN
- Kingston, THE WOMAN WARRIOR

Purpose: This course will explore a tradition of resistance in the novels of American women writers; we will begin at the turn of the nineteenth century and move through the twentieth century to the contemporary period. We will examine the complexities of gender, race, and ethnicity, focusing on how American women novelists are in conversation with one another, as well as resistant to or reflective of the more conventional American literary tradition.

Papers: There will be two short response papers (3 pages in length) and two longer, critical papers (6-8 pages in length).

Examinations: There will be a midterm examination and a final examination for this course.

ENGLISH 3903, Section 005, SPECIAL TOPICS, CRIME FICTION

INSTRUCTOR: TALBURT

Textbooks Required:

Any edition for any of the novels below may be used.

- Mansfield-Kelley & Marchino, THE LONGMAN ANTHOLOGY OF DETECTIVE FICTION
  (Also published as Death by pen)
- Sayers, STRONG POISON
- Stout, TOO MANY COOKS
- Chandler, FAREWELL, MY LOVELY
- Hillerman, THIEF OF TIME
- Mosley, THE DEVIL IN A BLUE DRESS
- Paretsky, INDEMNITY ONLY
- Larsson, THE GIRL WITH THE DRAGON TATTOO

Purpose: Greed, betrayal, blood, and passion crowd the pages of noir fiction, what Barry Hannah (BFA U of A) dubbed "this underdog genre," Oxford American, Issue 55, p. 53.) For almost two centuries writers of crime fiction have brought rich and varied cultural perspectives to their works along with respect for the plot or storyline and its unraveling and the oldest purpose of literature, entertainment. The course will provide a forum for analysis and discussion and is open to any student who enjoys fiction and is willing to read different kinds and write and talk about them. Students should gain from the course an understanding of the nature and dimensions of crime fiction while developing their own aesthetic and philosophy regarding it.

Papers, Presentations, Special Procedures: Students will be expected to read assigned stories and articles from the Anthology and the listed novels (or an occasional alternative) and to write an analytical paper on a novel, author, or theme as it relates to some aspect of crime fiction and to present findings to the class. A forensic anthropologist will be a guest speaker. Student suggestions regarding assignments, grading, and class sessions will be welcomed.

ENGLISH 3923H, HONORS COLLOQUIUM: SHAKESPEARE AND OPERA

Textbooks Required:

- Shakespeare: Othello (any edition)
- " Macbeth (any edition)
- " Hamlet (any edition)
- " Romeo and Juliet (any edition)
- " A Midsummer Night's Dream (any edition)

Purpose: This is a class both in Shakespeare and in the art and methods of adaptation. First we shall read and discuss each Shakespearean play as an independent work of art, emphasizing its themes and ideas. Then we will view an operatic production of each work: Giuseppe Verdi's Othello and Macbeth, Ambroise Thomas's Hamlet, Charles Gounod's Romeo et Juliette, Henry Purcell's The Fairy Queen, and Benjamin Britten's A Midsummer Night's Dream.

Papers, presentation: Students will be required to produce a 10-minute in-class oral presentation on some aspect of adaptation for each opera and then revise this presentation as a short (5 pp.) essay. There will be six short presentations/papers in all.

Examination: One final examination.

ENGLISH 3923H, Section 003/3903, Section 006, HONORS COLLOQUIUM: THE ARKANSAS DELTA ORAL HISTORY PROJECT

Instructor: RAINES

Textbooks Required:

- Bolsterli: Born in the Delta
- Gatewood & Wayne: Arkansas Delta: Land of Paradox

Purpose: This innovative, service learning colloquium will give University of Arkansas students the opportunity to learn about collecting oral histories, to study the rich culture and lore of the Arkansas Delta, and to work collaboratively with students from high schools in the Delta. The course will begin with an intensive workshop on oral history at the Delta Cultural Center in Helena, AR. At the conclusion of this event, University of Arkansas students and students from the participating high schools will form virtual writing groups, which will "meet" online regularly for six weeks following the workshop. During this time, all students will be working on their oral history projects-researching topics, planning and conducting interviews, drafting initial versions of stories and projects growing out of the interviews. UA students will complete each step of the project the week prior to the high school students and serve as mentors to the high school students via the virtual writing groups. All students will participate in discussion commenting on each other's work via the Internet. Around midterm, all participants will come to Fayetteville for a weekend of face-to-face work and fun. The online collaborative work will continue for another several weeks, and the course will end with a public celebration and performance of student work in Helena. All expenses of travel, lodging, and meals for the two trips for Helena will be paid by the Brown Chair in English Literacy Initiative.

Special Procedures: Students will complete their own oral history project and share their experience with high school students via virtual writing groups.

ENGLISH 4003, ENGLISH LANGUAGE AND COMPOSITION FOR TEACHERS

Instructor: MONTGOMERY

Textbooks Required:

- Faulkner: Writing Good Sentences (3rd ed.)
- Jones & Faulkner: Writing Good Prose (4th ed.)

Purpose: An intensive study of sentence structure, punctuation, usage, and prose structure.

Assignments and Examinations: Exercises, and four major examinations.
ENGLISH 4013, UNDERGRADUATE POETRY WORKSHOP
INSTRUCTOR: LYONS

Textbooks Required:

None

Purpose: A poetry workshop for students who have taken both Creative Writing I (ENGL 2023) and Creative Writing II (ENGL 3013) and who wish to continue writing poetry in a more advanced class. Close attention will be paid to individual student manuscripts in a workshop environment.

Procedures: Students will submit their poems for workshop discussion. Full participation, both as a writer and a critic, is expected of each member of the class.

Examinations: Students will submit a final portfolio revised versions of poems workshopped throughout the semester.

ENGLISH 4023, UNDERGRADUATE FICTION WORKSHOP
INSTRUCTOR: VISWANATHAN

Textbooks Required:

Purpose: To write and learn to revise short stories and/or novel chapters; to learn to read and discuss peers' writing in a constructive and insightful way

Requirements: One short presentation on a published work of fiction; weekly responses to classmates' work; two or three 5-25 pp works of original fiction; and one revision.

YOU MUST HAVE RECEIVED A GRADE OF "A" OR "B" IN CREATIVE WRITING I AND II TO ENROLL FOR THIS COURSE. NO EXCEPTIONS.

ENGLISH 4303, INTRODUCTION TO SHAKESPEARE
ENGLISH 5653, SHAKESPEARE: PLAYS AND POEMS
INSTRUCTOR: STEPHENS

Textbooks Required:

Greenblatt, et al.  THE NORTON SHAKESPEARE  Norton
McDonald  THE BEDFORD COMPANION TO SHAKESPEARE (2nd ed.)  Bedford/St. Martin’s
Gibaldi, ed.  MLA HANDBOOK FOR WRITERS OF RESEARCH PAPERS  MLA

Purpose: We will read as many of Shakespeare's plays and sonnets as we can fit into one session, paying attention to the plays' literary participation in sixteenth- and seventeenth-century culture, to the development of Shakespeare's career, to his plays' representations of political, artistic, sexual, psychological, and theological concerns, to the sounds and rhythms of his verse, and to the serious fun he has with puns. We will also read many documents that will help us understand the contexts of Shakespeare's plays: descriptions of London, private letters in which courtiers describe revels at court, excerpts from tracts about nursing babies, treatises on how to educate children, stories that inspired some of Shakespeare's plays, and so on. Previous knowledge of Shakespeare is not required, but students should be avid readers and good writers. An open and inquiring mind is also necessary; Shakespeare addresses controversial topics, uses earthy speech, and resists moral reduction. We will read a selection of the sonnets; the history Henry IV; the comedies A Midsummer Night's Dream and Measure for Measure; the tragedies Hamlet, King Lear, and Macbeth; and the romance The Tempest. This means that students will need to spend a significant amount of time reading each night and on weekends. The format of the class will alternate between lecture and discussion.

Requirements: There will be a midterm and a final with both essay and short-answer questions, two papers of approximately seven pages, and frequent quizzes. Graduate students will take the exams, write longer papers, and read several critical articles. M.A. Advisory Code: B (See last page of course descriptions.)

ENGLISH 4503/5313, INTRODUCTION TO THEORY: DOUBLES IN 19TH-CENTURY LITERATURE AND BEYOND
INSTRUCTOR: BERNHARD JACKSON

Textbooks Required:

"  KIDNAPPED
Stoppard  ARCADIA
Dickens  DAVID COPPERFIELD
Brontë  JANE EYRE
Hogg  THE PRIVATE MEMOIRS AND CONFESSIONS OF A JUSTIFIED SINNER
Rhys  WIDE SARAGASSO SEA
Purpose: Nineteenth-Century literature is full of twins and doubles, from Lord Byron's double of himself, Childe Harold, to perhaps the most famous example of all, Robert Louis Stevenson's D. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. This course examines the phenomenon of the double from a number of different perspectives-historical, Psychoanalytic, feminist, and religious, to name a few—taking account of philosophical work on identity, as well. As well as reading and prose, we will watch The Prestige and Unknown White Male.

Papers: one short paper, one long paper.

Examinations: None.

ENGLISH 4513/5943, NARRATIVE THEORY

INSTRUCTOR: MARREN

Textbooks Required:

Herman THE CAMBRIDGE COMPANION TO NARRATIVE
Richardson NARRATIVE DYNAMICS: ESSAY ON TIME, PLOT, CLOSURE AND FRAME

Purpose: We explain our lives—to ourselves and to others—by means of narrative. And when we do that, we give to our experience a shape: a beginning, a middle, and an end. In doing so, we either discover or invent the meaning of our lives. This happens at a cultural level, too; we live in a world made of stories. Surely there is no human culture without its storytelling rituals, its myth of origins. In this course, which will presume no prior knowledge of narrative (or any) theory, we will explore questions such as: what is narrative? What kinds of narratives are there? What do narratives do, and how do they do it? What are some of the major trends in recent scholarship on narrative? We will study narrative beginnings, closure and plot; the narrative construction of reality; desire and narrative; and readers and writers of narratives, among other things.

Papers: short responses to the readings; term paper; oral presentation

Exams: TBA

ENGLISH 4573/5953, STUDIES IN MAJOR LITERARY MOVEMENTS: HISTORY WRITING: NATURE

INSTRUCTOR: MADISON, R.

Textbook Required:

Elder & Finch THE NORTON BOOK OF NATURE WRITING W.W. NORTON

Purpose: This course will engage students with the main currents of natural history in English, From Gilbert White to the present. Focus will be on the development of ecological awareness and is expression in literary culture. The major literary periods examined will include Romanticism, Realism, and Literary Naturalism. Representative writers may include White, Thoreau, John Burroughs, Muir, Steinbeck, Mowat, Leopold, and Abbey. Students will engage in reading, writing, and observation. Course applies toward Sustainability Minor.

Papers, Special Procedures: Each student will engage in an individual field project leading to substantial original nature writing in the form of a creative non-fiction term essay. Graduate students: bibliographical/pedagogical note in place of final exam.

Examinations: Mid-term, final.

Textbook Recommended:
Gioia, Mason TWENTIETH-CENTURY AMERICAN POETRY McGraw-Hill, 2004
Schoerke, eds. [Anthologies are chose for breadth of access to material to be explored in further depth through volumes of work by individual writers]

Purpose: The course will examine the long relationship between the French and the English languages in the production of poetry, particularly during the modern era, beginning in the mid nineteenth century. We will read a large number of French poems of the 19th and 20th centuries, along with work by poets writing in English, to discover the poems in their original circumstances and to realize the gifts of translation as a means of technical and artistic innovation, within a widening array of influences and cross-fertilizations. The hope is to incite occasions of eclectic revelation for both scholarly and creative purposes. There is a great deal to be made of a large body of material.
Assignments: Students specially interested in translation can produce translations from work contained in or suggested by the assigned texts; others can produce a substantial essay germane to the readings.
Note: A knowledge of French will of course be beneficial but not absolutely essential for the student who wishes to explore the subject matter of the course under the Special Topics designation. Most of the required texts present the French poems in literal prose translations. There will be an effort to discuss French pronunciation, in order to evoke the poetic music of the language.

Purpose: This seminar will attempt to explore three fundamental changes in the history of English versecraft: the transition from Old English alliteration to Middle English rhyming, the transition from chirographic presentation to print, and the success (or failure) of the free verse movement. We will focus on the changing interplay of prosodic theories and contemporary practice—i.e., how formal assumptions change in response to differing linguistic environments and to differing modes of publication. The reading schedule will be roughly divided into thirds: medieval to Chaucer; Chaucer to Whitman; Whitman to now. No knowledge of Old or Middle English is required.

Paper: This course is targeted as much to MFA as to MA and PhD candidates. Either a 15-25 page research paper (6000-credit) or an 8-10 page conference paper or an equivalent creative project (undertaken with preliminary approval by the instructor) is required. Possible projects include a detailed analysis of one innovative prosodist (e.g., Lanier) in terms of the history of prosody, or a study a significant poet/prosodist (e.g., Hopkins), or a florilegium of formal exercises.

Clarke, ed. WILLIAM STYRON'S NAT TURNER:
Purpose: This course uses American fiction to examine the complicated and sometimes combustible mix between literature and history, narrative and memory, myth and fact by paying particular attention to the genre of what has come to be known as historical fiction. The works here move from the Revolutionary War through the first decade of the twenty-first century and allow us to explore - and at times challenge - the parameters of what constitutes a work of historical fiction. As part of our effort we will maintain a steadfast focus on the connections of historical fiction to the larger American literary landscape. This, as a result, will include a study of the impact of literary and theoretical - naturalism and postmodernism for instance - that coincide with the political, socio-economic, and cultural shifts in the over two centuries of the American experiment. Among the many questions we will consider: What does it mean to dramatize and interpret actual people and events in a work of fiction? What is the authors' purpose in pursuing such a task? In answering the latter question, we will discuss works in which widely accepted histories - and the resultant ideas about America - are maintained, challenged, and/or revised. Thus, we will consider a number of themes present in these novels that are responding to both historical and contemporaneous issues. Our goal is to understand more fully the way narratives - historical and literary - are constructed and the ways in which those narratives, whether destabilizing hegemonies, unpacking myth, or assessing the moment, engage America's complicated relationship to history and fiction.

WORLD LITERATURE 3983, Section 004, MODERN ARABIC LITERATURE

Textbooks Required:

To be selected.

Purpose: This course aims at introducing students to the most outstanding selection from writings in Arabic poetry and novel of the 20th century from different countries (including Egypt, Syria, Lebanon, Palestine, and Sudan), examining historical landmarks (i.e., struggle for independence, internal sociopolitical strife, the Arab-Israeli conflict) which have contributed to the evolution of modern Arab society and their influence on the writers of the literature discussed in the course, and analyzing the rhetorical devices as well as literary techniques employed by the authors for a fruitful encounter with major novels and poems from Arabic literature.

WORLD LITERATURE 3983, MIDDLE EASTERN STUDIES 410V, MODERN IRANIAN LITERATURE

Required Textbooks:

Abrahamian A HISTORY OF MODERN IRAN Cambridge UP
Hedayat BLIND OWL Grove Press
Parsipur WOMEN WITHOUT MEN The Feminist Press at CUNY
Farrokhzad SIN University of Arkansas Press
Satrapi PERSEPOLIS: THE STORY OF A CHILDHOOD Pantheon
Ghaffarzadegan FORTUNE TOLD IN BLOOD Center for Middle Eastern Studies, University of Texas at Austin

Purpose: This course will examine a variety of works by leading modern Iranian poets and prose authors in translation and place them in their social and political contexts. The works of these visionary writers give us a greater understanding of modern Iran. The class includes both lectures on the writers and their historical backgrounds as well as classroom discussions of the literary works. While this course is a study of literature, students can use the literary works to write on pertinent Iranian socio-political topics. No knowledge of Persian is required.
Papers, Presentations, Special Procedures: 1) A mid-term paper of 5-7 pages: 20%. 2) A final paper of 5-7 pages: 30%. 3) A short presentation of one of the papers due the exam day: 5%. 4) Reader response: 30%. A one-page, typed response to the reading, along with a question you want to discuss in class, due Mondays. 5) Attendance and prepared participation: 15%. The class will include regular discussions of the readings, so your participation is essential.
