ENGL 5173, Chaucer’s Library

Teacher: W. Quinn

Supplemental Texts: to be provided by pdf.

Description: The purpose of this course is to read (in modern English translation) what Chaucer read. One goal will be to achieve a firm if not a complete understanding of Chaucer’s inspiration. Another goal will be to assess the merits of what comprised a pre-1400 canon of Latin, French, Italian and English literature. A primary question that we will ask about each of Chaucer’s “borrowings” is what was his implicit theory of translation.

Requirements:
Grading: Class attendance and active participation is mandatory. Undergrads will be asked to produce a 5-10 essay paper analyzing one Chaucerian text in comparison to its sources (= 10% final grade). Grads will be asked to produce a “conference quality” paper (= 20%).

Description:
This course critically examines African American literary works and cultural texts using foodways as a critical framework. Texts range from the prose fiction of Ernest Gaines to Dave Chappelle and Aaron McGruder skits. Such texts continue to attest to the evolving function of food (or its lack) in African American literature and culture. In this course, however, we want to complicate this understanding of food. Among other things, we will explore how food has been used to create and subvert personal and communal identities. Most importantly, using texts ranging from the films Soul Food, Princess and the Frog, Marlon Riggs’ documentary Black Is, Black Ain’t, to Jesmyn Ward’s Salvage the Bones, we will explore how ideas about food, food preparation, and food consumption, contribute to gender and racial inequality, and create social class distinctions.

ENGL 5533, Technical Writing Praxis

Teacher: A. Pope

Textbooks Required:
Plain Language and Ethical Action: A Dialogic Approach to Technical Content in the Twenty-First Century by Russel Willerton. ISBN: 978-0415741040

Track-Based Readings (Only required by students taking a particular track):

Grant and Proposal Writing

Writing, Style, and Persuasion

Organizational and Report Writing
Description: Technical Writing can be described as the rhetorical presentation of information within a situated context to gain a particular effect. Being a skilled technical writer means being able to apply the relevant theory to a given situation, adapting to the needs of local audiences and constraints as needed. This course will prepare you for such work by giving you a broad foundation in technical writing before then shifting to the act of mixing theory with practice, creating a theory-driven practice, or praxis.

This particular course will be broken down into two major units. The first unit will be shared between all students, and focus on the history, role, and skills of technical writers. The second unit will consist of three separate tracks, with each student choosing one track to specialize in. The tracks available for the course are as follows:

Grant and Proposal Writing: Students in this track will learn the process and steps behind creating effective grants and proposals, delving into the process of researching calls for proposals, putting together a narrative for a grant or proposal, and successfully crafting final text for submission. While in this track, students will write and submit a grant or proposal.

Writing, Style, and Persuasion: Students in this track will focus extensively on style and persuasion, developing a deeper understanding of the way texts are written in a particular style. Part of this track will involve crafting an extended text that uses a situated style, such as that of an academic journal.

Report and Organizational Writing: Students in this track will focus on the way documents evolve with and shape organizations, with a particular focus on understanding how different document genres are created and modified over time. In this track, students will craft a workplace-ready report or other informational text.

Essays, exams, and other major requirements for undergraduates: Students will be expected to submit weekly reading responses, complete multiple major projects, as well as a final capstone project in the track of their choice.
