ENGL 3903-001, Special Topics: Crafting a Creative Life: Best Practices for Beginning Writer
ENGL 3923H-002, Honors Colloquium: Crafting a Creative Life: Best Practices for Beginning Writer

Instructor: G. Davis

Textbooks Required:
N/A

Description: This course introduces and demystifies the professional world of creative writing for beginners, as well as for those who may have some experience. Participants will conduct preliminary research on inspiring publication opportunities and post-graduation prospects that fit both their aesthetic tastes and personal ambitions. We will also address how to find (or create) an active literary community after graduation, including applying to residencies, workshops, and grad programs in creative writing. Bring any and all questions related to the life of a writer!

Essays, exams, and other major requirements for undergraduates: multiple in-class presentations, final portfolio, and enthusiastic participation.

ENGL 5233-001, Craft of Translation I: Early North American Encounters Narratives
ENGL 5703-001, Advanced Studies in American Literature and Culture Before 1900: Early North American Encounters Narratives

Instructor: J. DuVal

Textbooks Required:

Some short narratives that I will type up and send as attachments

Textbooks Recommended:

Description: This course will concentrate on listening to the voices of representative people living in, visiting, invading, or being abducted to North America from 1492 through 1781. The readings will be encounter narratives, captivity narratives, slave narratives, a few legal documents, and one or two poems.

Major requirements: In addition to the readings, students will keep journals of their readings, give an oral report to the class on the day when that text is assigned, and write a research paper or creative project, subject to my previous approval. For their research papers, students taking the course for Craft of Translation credit will report on narratives from languages other than English and examine challenges and approaches to translating those narratives; for a creative project they should do a translation from an early American document and discuss challenges and approaches to that translation.
