

MINORITY POLITICS & POLICY

MWF | 10:45-11:35 AM | MEMH 114
PLSC 400V-002-12192

We will analyze American public policy and politics through an intersectional lens, with special focus on race, class, gender, and sexuality. While we trace and examine the relationships between various minority groups and the American government and its institutions through readings, films, and popular culture materials. We will investigate how these historical relationships have influenced the current sociopolitical and economic landscape of the United States. Focus will be placed on analyzing Black, Chicanx/Latinx, Native American, and LGBTQ+ populations.
