

Thought of the week: Successful career development requires a different skill set than successfully completing college. Designing your career requires being curious about the work, reaching out to those doing the work currently, and articulating your own skills and abilities and how they match the work. To practice this skill set, consider enrolling in Fulbright College Career Connections, ARSC 3013. (This is a MWF class, but most of the Friday class meetings will be online.)

Career Events

Everyone Can Code Brown Bag program: Thursday, Nov. 8, 12pm-1pm in Union 508. Bring your lunch or join online to learn coding skills that could make you eligible for the 7 million jobs requiring some coding skill. For more information, read the Newswire article hyperlinked to the event name.

Are you going to be in the Dallas area over Winter Break? JCPenney has invited U of A students to tour their corporate headquarters in Plano, TX and connect with their recruiting team on Monday 1/7/19. The exact time is still TBD, but this tour will take place sometime in the afternoon. Everyone attending will be given a meeting location and time. We will tour the office as a group. Please register before 11/16/18. This is important because the visit will be cancelled unless we have at least 10 students registered. This will be a great networking opportunity!

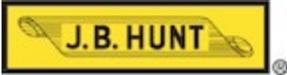

To register, please sign up using this form: JCP Signup

Career Tip

If you're completing an internship in the spring and would like to receive academic credit for it, consider applying for the Fulbright College Internship course. In order to be considered, you need to have secured an internship, have at least a 2.5 GPA and completed 45 hours of credit. For more information and to apply, click on the course hyperlink.
